Highlights

Census of State and Federal Correctional Facilities, 1995

On June 30, 1995, the Bureau of Justice Statistics conducted an enumeration of all State and Federal adult correctional facilities. These facilities included places of confinement like prisons, prison hospitals, prison farms, boot camps, and centers for reception, classification, or alcohol/drug treatment, and community-based facilities like halfway houses and work release centers. Facilities were included if they housed primarily State or Federal prisoners; were physically, functionally, and administratively separate from other facilities; and were operational on the day of the census.

Jails and other local or regional detention facilities were specifically excluded from the census, as were private facilities not exclusively for State or Federal inmates. Also excluded were facilities for the military, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Bureau of Indian Affairs, U.S. Marshals Service, and correctional hospital wards not operated by correctional authorities.

Number of facilities

- The number of State and Federal correctional facilities in operation increased 17%, from 1,287 at midyear 1990, when the last census was conducted, to 1,500 at midyear 1995.
- In 1995 States operated 1,375 facilities and the Federal Bureau of Prisons operated 125 facilities.
- About 1 in 8 State prisons or other types of correctional facilities and 1 in 3 Federal facilities were added during the early 1990's.

Capacity

- Each year from 1990 to 1995 the rated capacity of State facilities expanded an average 6.9%. In 1995 the capacity was almost 910,000, up from 650,600 in 1990.
- The increase in State capacity lagged inmate growth so that the percent of capacity occupied rose from 101% to 103%.
- Federal capacity in 1995 was nearly 66,000. After 1990, rated capacity grew annually at an average of 9.3% so that the percent of Federal capacity occupied fell from 135% to 124%.

Facility types

- In both 1990 and 1995 community-based institutions — those in which half or more of the inmates are permitted to leave the premises, unaccompanied — accounted for about 20% of all facilities. Confinement facilities accounted for 80%.
- The distribution of inmates by type of facility remained virtually unchanged from 1990 to 1995: In 1990 all but 2% of prisoners were housed in confinement facilities, and in 1995 all but 3%.

Security levels

- More State facilities of all security levels were in operation in 1995 than 5 years earlier. By contrast, the Federal system operated more minimum security facilities and fewer maximum and medium security institutions.

Court orders

- Fewer facilities were under court orders or consent decrees to limit population and for the totality of conditions in 1995 than in 1990. However, more were being cited for specific conditions of confinement in 1995.

Number of inmates

- The number of inmates in State and Federal correctional facilities rose 43% from 715,649 in 1990 to 1,023,572 in 1995, an average increase of about 7.4% per year.

- In both 1990 and 1995 about 20% of inmates were classified as maximum security risks, 40% as medium security, and 33% as minimum security. The remainder were not assigned a custody level or were regarded as very low risk.

Prisoner assaults

- Inmates committed more assaults against staff and other inmates during

168 State facilities and 45 Federal facilities were added between 1990 and 1995 the annual period ending in 1995 than in 1990.

- When inmate growth is considered, however, the 1995 rate of assault was slightly lower than the 1990 rate. The declining rate of assault occurred in medium and minimum security facilities.

Number of correctional employees

- The number of employees in correctional facilities totaled 347,320 at mid-year 1995, up from 264,201 in 1990.
- Nearly two-thirds of all correctional staff were in custody or security positions. At midyear 1995 nearly 221,000 employees worked in custody or security positions, 56,000 in professional, technical, or educational positions, 27,000 in clerical positions, 24,000 in maintenance or food service, and 9,500 in administration.

State and Federal facilities held 1,023,572 inmates in 1995, up from 715,649 in 1990

Inmate-to-staff ratio

- Between 1990 and 1995 the number of inmates held grew faster than the correctional staff. In 1990 there were 2.7 inmates per employee, and in 1995, 2.9.
- Relative to the number of custody or security employees, the number of inmates rose from 4.2 to 4.6.

Female staff

- The female payroll staff rose 60% between 1990 and 1995, while male staff rose by 29%.

- Women made up nearly a third of all correctional staff in 1995. In 5 years their number had grown from 62,833 to 100,659.

Race of staff

- About 71 in every 100 correctional facility employees in 1995 were white, 20 were black, 6 were Hispanic, and 2 were of other races.
- Between 1990 and 1995 the number of white employees rose by 24%, the number of blacks by 33%, and the number of Hispanics by 57%.
- More than 86,000 correctional staff in 1995 were black or Hispanic, up from 62,000 in 1990.

347,320 persons were employed in State or Federal correctional facilities in 1995, an increase of 32% in 5 years

Note: Confinement institutions are facilities in which less than 50% of the inmates are regularly permitted to leave the premises unaccompanied by staff. Community-based institutions are facilities in which 50% or more of the inmates are regularly permitted to leave the premises unaccompanied. Confinement facilities include institutions for general adult population confinement: boot camps; reception, diagnosis, and classification centers; prison hospitals; alcohol and drug treatment centers; and youthful offender facilities. Community-based facilities include halfway houses, restitution centers, and prerelease, work release, and study release centers.

The 1995 Census of State and Federal Adult Correctional Facilities identified 1,500 facilities in operation at midyear

Number of facilities Overall, the number of correctional facilities, both confinement and community-based, increased 17% from midyear 1990 when the previous Census counted 1,287 facilities.

Facilities operating under State authority grew 14% from 1,207 to 1,375 while facilities operating under Federal authority rose 56% from 80 to 125.

The number of confinement facilities throughout the country reached 1,196 in 1995, up 15% from 5 years earlier, and the number of community-based facilities grew by 22% to 304.

Population State and Federal correctional facilities at midyear 1995 held 1,023,572 persons, 43% more than at midyear 1990, when 715,649 inmates were in custody.

The number of inmates per 100,000 U.S. residents rose from 263 in 1990 to 390 in 1995.

Men and women 94% of all inmates were men and 6% were women. The number of male inmates increased 42%, and female inmates, 56%, over the 5-year period.

Type of facility 97% of all State and Federal prisoners were in confinement facilities where less than half the population regularly leave the premises unaccompanied by staff.

3% were in community-based facilities where half or more of the population leave unaccompanied.

State prison authorities operated more than four-fifths of the Nation's correctional facilities

Facilities State authorities operated 84% of all correctional facilities; the Federal Bureau of Prisons, 7%; private contractors, 7%; and States and localities as joint authorities, 1%.

Prisoners More than 9 of every 10 prisoners were held in facilities operated by State authorities. 8% of the Nation's prisoners were held by Federal authorities, 2% by private contractors, and less than 1% by cooperative arrangement between State and local authorities.

*Based on the estimated U.S. resident population for July 1, 1995.

The South accounted for nearly 50% of State correctional facilities and more than 40% of State prisoners at midyear 1995

Regions State facilities housed between 150,000 and 200,000 inmates in each region except the South, where institutions held more than 400,000 prisoners.

The South had the largest number of prisoners per 100,000 State residents (437), and the Northeast had the lowest number (293).

Note: The number of inmates of Hispanic origin is underreported. In 28 Federal facilities race but not Hispanic origin was reported for 21,563 inmates.

More than 6 in every 10 persons held in correctional facilities were black or Hispanic

All inmates 48% of inmates were black non-Hispanic; 36%, white non-Hispanic; 14%, Hispanic; 1%, Native American; and 1%, Asian/Pacific Islander.

Federal 44% of inmates were white non-Hispanic; 36%, black non-Hispanic; 18%, Hispanic; 1%, Native American; and 1%, Asian/Pacific Islander.

Because of underreporting of race and Hispanic origin of 21,563 inmates in 28 Federal facilities, the proportion of white non-Hispanic inmates may be overstated and the proportion of Hispanic inmates understated.

State 49% of inmates were black non-Hispanic; 35%, white non-Hispanic; 14%, Hispanic; 1%, Native American; and 1%, Asian or Pacific Islander.

State and Federal correctional facilities had an average daily population of 990,616 for July 1, 1994-June 30, 1995

Federal The average daily population was 81,070, about 48% greater than in 1990.

State The average daily population was 909,546, about 43% higher than in 1990.

From 1990 to 1995 the number of inmates increased slightly more than facility capacity, making occupancy rise from 103% to 105% of rated capacity

State facilities The rated capacity grew 40% between 1990 and 1995, somewhat less than the 43% growth in State prisoners, causing occupancy in State facilities to rise from 101% to 103%.

State facilities housing 1,000-2,499 inmates and 2,500 inmates or more had population growths of 60% and 78%, respectively. Capacity increased less than the population so that occupancy went from 102% to 108% (1,000-2,499) and from 103% to 106% (2,500 or more).

Federal facilities Between 1990 and 1995 the rated capacity rose 56% while the prison population grew more than 44%. Occupancy thereby declined from 135% to 124%.

Facilities housing 1,000-2,499 people accounted for almost half the Federal inmates in 1995. From 1990 to 1995 facilities of this size had a population increase of 73% and a growth in rated capacity of 77%. In 1995, population was 145% of rated capacity for facilities holding 1,000 to 2,499 — higher than for any other size category of facility.

Most facilities in 1995 were comparatively small, holding fewer than 500 inmates

All facilities Over 50% of facilities held fewer than 500 inmates; about 20% held 500-999; about 20%, 1,000-2,499; and less than 5%, 2,500.

1990 and 1995 The percentage of inmate facilities with fewer than 500 inmates fell from 63% in 1990 to 57% in 1995. More institutions housing 1,000 inmates or more were in use in 1995 (24%) than 5 years earlier (16%).

Federal and State Facilities holding 500 or more inmates were more common in the Federal system (54%) than in State systems (42%).

Regions The West, compared to other regions, had a distinctive distribution of correctional facilities: 71% of the institutions housed fewer than 500 inmates.

Correctional facilities overall were more specialized in 1995 than in 1990:
13% were for specialized functions in 1995, and 6%, in 1990

Treatment facilities Medical treatment was a primary function of 15% of State and Federal confinement facilities in 1995, up from 8% in 1990. Alcohol and drug treatment accounted for 16% in 1995 and 9% in 1990.

Community-based facilities States added 41 facilities, from 250 in 1990 to 291 in 1995. Most of those added had work release or pre-release as primary functions.

Note: Facility age is the age of the oldest building in a complex currently used to house inmates.

As States and the Federal Prison System opened new institutions or replaced old ones, the overall age of the facilities fell sharply: In 1995, 51% of the facilities were less than 20 years old, compared to 37% in 1990

Regions Newer housing stock prevailed in every region of the country but was most notable in the Northeast where the proportion of institutions less than 20 years old rose from 30% in 1990 to 50% in 1995.

Inmates In 1995 well over half the inmates were housed in facilities built after 1975. In 1990, 4 in 10 inmates had been in facilities less than 20 years old.

The percentage of inmates in institutions 50 years old or older decreased from 38% in 1990 to 25% in 1995. In 1995 nearly 56,000 inmates were held in facilities that were at least 100 years old.

Despite the addition of facilities or the replacement of old ones after 1990, the mix of facilities with maximum, medium, or minimum security levels remained about the same in 1995

Security levels Maximum security confinement facilities comprised 23% of State and Federal facilities in 1990 and 25% in 1995. Medium security institutions were 38% and minimum security facilities 37% of the total in 1995.

Facility size and security level Maximum security facilities were most likely large institutions, and minimum security facilities, small institutions. Over half the maximum security facilities in 1995 housed 1,000 inmates or more. About 80% of the minimum security facilities held fewer than 500 each. Medium security facilities were of every size: 31% small capacity, 29% medium, and 40% large capacity.

Sex of inmates and security level About 85% of both maximum and medium security facilities held men only, and 7% or 8% women only, and 7% or 8% both sexes. Minimum security institutions in 1995 were slightly less likely than other facilities to house men only (83%), more likely to house women only (11%), and about as likely to house both sexes (6%).

*Refers to the number of years between date of original construction and the census years.

The oldest Federal confinement facility in operation at the time of the census was the U.S. Penitentiary, Leavenworth, KS (1896). The oldest State confinement facility was the New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, NJ, originally constructed in 1797.

^fThe ages of 3 minimum security facilities were not reported in 1995.

9 out of 10 confined inmates were in male-only facilities in 1995

Sex of inmates 5% of inmates were in facilities for females only, and 6% in facilities for both sexes.

Security levels Inmates in maximum security facilities were the most likely to be in male-only institutions (92%), whereas inmates in minimum security were the least likely (85%).

Age of facility and security levels 10% of the inmates in maximum security facilities and 2% of the inmates in minimum security facilities were also in buildings 100 years old or older.

Size of facility Two-thirds of inmates in 1995 lived in facilities with average daily populations between 500 and 2,499 inmates. About 13% of confined inmates were in facilities with fewer than 500, and 20% were in institutions of 2,500 or more.

^gThe oldest State confinement facility was the New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, NJ., originally constructed in 1797.

^hThe ages of 3 minimum security facilities were not reported in 1995.

The percentage of inmates held in maximum security facilities remained stable between 1990 and 1995

State In both 1990 and 1995, about the same proportions of State prisoners were kept in maximum (under 40% of all inmates), medium (almost 50%), or minimum (10%) security facilities.

Federal Compared to State inmates in 1995, smaller percentages of Federal inmates were in maximum (11%) or medium (32%) security facilities.

Most Federal inmates were in minimum (57%) security institutions.

Between 1990 and 1995 the proportion of Federal prisoners in maximum security institutions remained nearly unchanged. Medium security facilities held a declining percentage of inmates as minimum security facilities held an increasing one.

Community-based facilities

Between 1990 and 1995 the number of State community-based inmates living in medium security institutions increased 84%, and those in minimum security facilities, 76%. All Federal community-based facilities were minimum security.

The custody levels of State inmates, like the security levels of the facilities, were similarly distributed in 1990 and 1995: The percentage of maximum security prisoners remained about 21%

State In 1995 about 21% of prisoners were classified as maximum security, 43% as medium security, and 35% as minimum security.

Federal The number of inmates classified as medium security fell from 58% to 32% of all inmates, as minimum security expanded from 35% to 57%. The number of maximum security inmates increased from 7% to 11% of all Federal inmates.

Population increases Among the State custody levels between 1990 and 1995, the rate of increase for minimum security inmates was highest: 58%. The number classified as medium security went up 49% and those classified as maximum, 32%.

During this period the number of minimum security Federal inmates jumped 158% and maximum security inmates increased 149%, while the number of medium security prisoners in the Federal system declined 14%.

^dThe State count for 1995 and the total for 1995 includes 6 Federal inmates held under sentence of death in State facilities.

^eThe number of non-U.S. citizens was not reported in 19% of all facilities in 1995.

^fFor 1995 excludes 64 Federal inmates held under contract outside the Federal system.

From 1990 to 1995 the number of prisoner deaths almost doubled and the number of noncitizen inmates more than doubled

Deaths The number of inmate deaths rose 92%, from 1,729 during the 12 months preceding the 1990 census to 3,311 during the 12 months preceding the 1995 census.

The number of inmate deaths rose from 2.4 per 1,000 State inmates in 1990 to 3.4 in 1995. The death rate declined in Federal prisons, from 2.9 per 1,000 inmates held in 1990 to 2.7 in 1995.

Noncitizens The number of noncitizens more than doubled, from 25,250 in 1990 to 51,500 in 1995. In 1995 5.0% of State and Federal prisoners were noncitizens, up from 3.5% in 1990.

Furloughs The number of regularly scheduled inmate furloughs fell 59% from 28,849 during the year preceding the 1990 census to 11,776 in the year leading up to the 1995 census. During this period the number of emergency furloughs declined 60% from 7,319 to 2,963.

Note: A total of 323 State facilities were under court order or consent decree to limit population, for specific conditions of confinement, or for both reasons, in 1990; in 1995 this total was 378.

*Detail adds to more than the total number of facilities under court order for specific conditions because some facilities were under court order for more than one reason.

...Not reported.

In both 1990 and 1995 over a quarter of State correctional facilities operated under a court order

State 378 correctional facilities (27%) were under court order or consent decree for specific conditions, to limit population, or for the totality of conditions at midyear 1995.

Five years earlier 323 State facilities, 27% of those in operation in 1990, were under court order.

Causes for orders Crowding was the most frequently cited specific condition in 1995, affecting 213 facilities, followed by medical facilities (139), library services (129), and staffing (118).

More facilities were under court directives to remedy specific conditions in 1995 (321) than in 1990 (242). Fewer institutions were ordered to limit population in 1995 (174 versus 183).

Two causes cited in 1995 were absent in 1990: 74 facilities were to revise policies concerning inmate rights to religious expression, and 30 facilities were to modify search policies.

Federal 113 Federal Bureau of Prisons facilities were under court order in 1995: 112 to modify the inmate phone service and 1 to limit the facility population. No Federal facility was under court order in 1990.

The rates of inmate assaults on other inmates and on staff declined from 1990 to 1995

Assaults on inmates The annual number of assaults by inmates on other inmates rose 20% — from 21,590 in 1990 to 25,948 in 1995. However, the number per 1,000 inmates decreased from 31.3 in 1990 to 27.0 in 1995.

Assaults on staff Assaults on staff grew by a third from 10,731 in 1990 to 14,165 in 1995. The number per 1,000 State prisoners declined from 17.1 in 1990 to 14.8 in 1995, but the number per 1,000 Federal inmates rose from 3.1 to 4.1 per 1,000 prisoners.

Other violations Fewer inmate violations unrelated to assault were reported in 1995 than in 1990.

Almost all State and Federal correctional facilities offered inmate counseling and work programs

Counseling Overall, 97% of the facilities offered counseling. Drug and alcohol counseling was available in nearly 90% of the facilities; psychological, life skills, and psychiatric counseling in 69%; community adjustment counseling in 67%; employment search counseling in 60%; and parenting and child rearing in nearly 40%.

Work programs Overall, 94% of the facilities operated inmate work programs. About 65% of all inmates — 63% of State inmates and 90% of Federal inmates — participated in one or more work programs.

Facility support activities engaged inmates in 90% of the institutions, public works programs in 52%, and prison industries in 37%. About a fourth of the correctional facilities had farming or other agricultural work.

Education programs Including General Equivalency Diploma (GED), 80% of the facilities provided secondary educational programs; 75% provided basic adult education; 54%, vocational training; and 33%, special educational programs such as studies for inmates with learning disabilities. College-level course work was offered by 33% of the facilities, and study release programs, by 11%.

About 23% of the prisoners were enrolled in some type of education in 1995, including 22% of State inmates and 29% of Federal inmates.

Between 1990 and 1995 the number of prisoners participating in prison boot camp programs tripled

Boot camp programs Over the 5 years the number of prisons operating a bootcamp program increased from 26 to 65. Most were in minimum security facilities. In 1995, 20 of the 65 programs operated in medium security facilities, and 12, in maximum security institutions.

Regions 45% of all prison boot camp programs were in the South, 22% in the West, 16% in the Northeast, and 14% in the Midwest. Sixty-two were State-operated; 2 were Federally operated; and 1 was privately run.

Smaller prisons 57% of the boot camps were in facilities with capacities under 500. About 20% were in institutions with 1,000-2,499 inmates, 19% in facilities holding 500-999 inmates, and 5% with capacities of 2,500 inmates or more.

The number of State or Federal employees staffing prisons increased about a third, from 264,201 in 1990 to 347,320 in 1995

Occupations The number of correctional workers in administrative, clerical, professional and technical jobs expanded 28% or more between 1990 and 1995. The number of educational employees increased 1%. The number of maintenance and food service workers went up 8%.

Custody/security staff Correctional officers and related security staff accounted for nearly 221,000 out of a total 347,320 employees in 1995, outnumbering by nearly 2 to 1 all other types of correctional workers combined.

Professional, technical, and educational staff, accounted for 16%, followed by clerical (8%), maintenance and food service (7%), and administrative (3%) employees.

Confinement and community-based
The size of confinement staffs increased 31%, compared to a 52% staff growth for community-based facilities.

The pattern of correctional job categories varied greatly between the State and Federal prison systems

Federal and State 41% of the Federal and 65% of the State correctional employees were reported to be in custody or security occupations. This difference may reflect the smaller percentage of prisoners sentenced for violent crime in Federal prisons than in State facilities.

Because State correctional facilities hold a higher percentage of prisoners in maximum security, a similarly greater percentage of correctional officers is required to staff those facilities. Also, the Federal Bureau of Prisons trains and continually qualifies much of its staff to perform custody and security functions in addition to the duties of other occupations.

About 6% of all Federal correctional workers were classified as administrative, compared to about 3% of State correctional staff.

West and South Regional differences in job categories were fairly small. The West and South were the regions with the greatest differences in the employment mix.

Custody and security personnel were about 67% of all staff in the Northeast and South but 62% in the West. Professional and technical staff comprised 15% of all State correctional workers in the South but 10% in the West. The larger categories in the West, when compared to the South, included clerical staff, 10% versus 6%, and maintenance and food service employees, 8% versus 5%.

*Includes employees with unspecified occupations.

Over 300,000 employees worked in facilities holding men only, over 20,000 worked in facilities for women alone, and over 24,000 worked in facilities housing both sexes

Facilities for men or women 88% of all confinement facility employees worked where there were male inmates only, 6% where there were female inmates only, and 6% in facilities for both sexes. A larger proportion of the staff in community-based facilities worked where there were both sexes (21%), a relatively smaller proportion in facilities for men only (72%), and about the same proportion in facilities for women only (7%).

State and Federal State confinement employees were slightly more likely to be working in institutions for both sexes (7%) than were Federal employees (5%), and slightly less likely to be performing their duties in facilities for men only (87% versus 89%).

Personnel categories In both State and Federal prison systems, custody/security and clerical employees were the occupational groups most likely to be working in confinement institutions for men only (89% of both categories); and professional/technical staff, the least likely (84%).

A smaller proportion of community-based payroll employees were white non-Hispanic (54%) than were confinement facility workers (72%). Relatively more community-based staff were black non-Hispanic: (39% of community-based staff and 20% of confinement staff).

The number of inmates per employee was lowest in State confinement facilities and highest in Federal community-based facilities

Inmate-to-employee ratios At midyear 1995 the overall number of inmates per correctional facility employee was lowest in State confinement institutions (2.9 to 1). The ratios for other types of facilities were as follows:

Federal confinement (3.2 to 1)

State community-based (3.8 to 1)

Federal community-based (3.9 to 1).

Custody and security staff Based on the number of inmates at midyear 1995 divided by all payroll, nonpayroll, full-time, part-time, and contract staff, excluding community volunteers — the inmate-to-staff ratio was lowest among custody or security staff in State-operated confinement facilities (4.4), and second lowest among custody or security staff in State-operated community-based facilities (6.1).

For most occupational categories, the Federal system held fewer inmates per employee than the State systems overall. Custody or security staff were the exception: For each correctional officer, the Federal system had 7.9 inmates and State institutions, 4.4 inmates.

Correctional facilities held more prisoners per employee in 1995 than in 1990

Inmate-to-employee ratios The overall inmate-to-staff ratio increased from 2.7 inmates per employee (1990) to 2.9 (1995). In confinement facilities it rose from 2.7 to 2.9, and in community-based facilities, from 3.1 to 3.8.

Inmate-to-staff ratios rose in all occupational categories from 1990 to 1995. The largest increases were among administrative workers — 96.9 in 1990 versus 107.6 in 1995, and maintenance and food service employees, 32.7 versus 43.4.

Custody and security The smallest increases in inmate-to-staff ratios were among custody and security employees: The number of inmates per confinement staff member rose from 4.2 in 1990 to 4.6 in 1995, and the number per community-based staff member grew from 5.1 to 6.2.

The number of private correctional facilities and inmates in them increased from 1990 to 1995

State and Federal facilities The number of private facilities operating under contract to State or Federal authorities increased 64% from 67 in 1990 to 110 in 1995.

State and Federal inmates The average daily number of inmates incarcerated in private facilities more than doubled from 7,771 to 16,426.

Midyear 1995 The 110 private facilities in operation accounted for 7% of the Nation's total correctional housing stock. The 16,426 inmates in private institutions accounted for 2% of the total prisoner population.

Community-based facilities Nearly 3 in every 4 private correctional facilities were community-based, that is, institutions in which 50% or more of the residents were permitted to leave, unaccompanied by staff for work or study.

More than 9 in every 10 held fewer than 500 inmates; 9 in every 10 were classified as minimum security institutions; and nearly 3 in every 4 functioned primarily as work release or prerelease facilities.

A half of 1% of all State prisoners in 1995 were under age 18

State State correctional facilities held a total of 5,309 inmates under age 18 at midyear 1995, about ½ of 1% of all State inmates.

The number of prisoners under 18 rose 47% from 3,600 at midyear 1990. This was a slightly larger increase than that of the overall State prisoner population (43%).

Security level Nearly all the prisoners under age 18 were held in confinement facilities. About 47% of these youngest prisoners were in maximum security institutions, 42% in medium security, and 11% in minimum security.

Regions The West reported the highest proportion of inmates under age 18 who were assigned to maximum security prisons (65% of the young prisoners), followed by the Northeast (54%), the South (42%), and the Midwest (41%).

Federal No inmates in Federal facilities were under age 18; however, 64 persons in the age group were housed under contract outside the Federal system.

Note: Correctional reporting authorities use a variety of capacity measures to reflect both available space to house inmates and the ability to staff and operate an institution. Design capacity is the number of inmates or residents that planners or architects intended. Rated capacity is the number of beds or inmates assigned by a rating official. Percent of capacity occupied is determined by dividing the number of inmates or residents housed on the day of the census by the reported capacity.

Methodology

The 1995 Census of State and Federal Adult Correctional Facilities was the fifth enumeration of State institutions and the second of Federal institutions sponsored by the Bureau of Justice Statistics. Earlier censuses were completed in 1974, 1979, 1984, and 1990.

The facility universe was developed from the Census of State and Federal Adult Correctional Facilities conducted in 1990. Each department of corrections was contacted to identify new facilities and facilities that had been closed since June 30, 1990. Telephone follow-ups with data providers were carried out in the fall of 1995 and resulted in a final response rate of 100%.

Facilities were included in the census if they were staffed with Federal, State, local, or private employees; housed primarily State or Federal prisoners; were physically, functionally, and administratively separate from other facilities; and were operational on June 30, 1995. The census also included 110 private facilities under exclusive contract to State governments or to the Federal Bureau of Prisons to house prisoners.

The Census included the following types of State and Federal adult correctional facilities: prisons; prison farms; reception, diagnostic and classification centers; road camps; forestry and conservation camps; youthful offender facilities (except in California); vocational training facilities; drug and alcohol treatment facilities; and State-operated local detention facilities in Alaska, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Rhode Island, and Vermont. (Of these six States only Alaska had some locally administered correctional facilities — five local jails.)

Jails and other local regional detention facilities, including those housing State prisoners, were specifically excluded from the census, as were private facilities not exclusively for State or Federal inmates. Also excluded were facilities for the military, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Bureau of Indian Affairs, U.S. Marshals Service, and correctional hospital wards not operated by correctional authorities.

Correctional facilities were classified as community-based if 50% or more of the residents were regularly permitted to leave, unaccompanied, to work or study. These facilities included halfway houses, restitution centers, and prerelease, work release, and study release centers. Correctional facilities in which less than 50% of the inmates regularly left the facility unaccompanied were classified as confinement institutions.

Because the census was a complete enumeration, the results were not subject to sampling error. The census counted prisoners held in the facilities, a custody count, rather than prisoners over whom correctional authorities exercised control, a jurisdictional count.
